HOW TO MAKE FRIENDS

Consistency
Regularity and predictability necessary for two people to trust each other. As we get to know each other better, the left arm extends as the consistency increases.

Vulnerability
The willingness to let someone else impact us. Vulnerability is anything that makes us feel we put ourselves “out there,” as well as anything that “let’s them in.”

Positivity
Positivity is at the base of the triangle because a relationship cannot start or grow without it. Pathways to positivity: amusement, awe, gratitude, hope, inspiration, interest, joy, love, pride, and security.

Fri tentimacy is any relationship where two people feel really seen in a way that feels satisfying and safe for both of them.

Contact: Linked because we have something in common.

Common: Intentionally spend time together, but friendship is based on one commonality.

Confirmed: Shared history, but no a regular connection anymore.

Community: Spend regular time together, deeper relationship.

Committed: Intimately and consistently share lives with each other.

"We all tend to find that some circles of friends come to us more naturally, but we all need people in every circle."
HOW TO MAKE FRIENDS

REFLECTION:
What surprised you?

REFLECTION:
Which circle do you wish was fuller, stronger, or more meaningful?

REFLECTION:
Which circle expresses your greatest loneliness right now?

REFLECTION:
Which circle is the hardest for you to develop? Why?

REFLECTION:
Which circle do you want to celebrate?

All friendships start on the left side no matter how much we’re attracted to each other. It’s less about simply discovering the right friend, and more about developing the right friendship.

Put a star on the circle that represents your greatest loneliness right now. Now look to the left. Which circle(s) contains the best "pool" of friends to develop?

How can you develop those friendships?
